

ACFID MEDIA AWARD 2019 – NOMINATION FORM

The Australian Council for International Development (ACFID) is now calling for nominations for the 2019 ACFID Media Award.

The ACFID Media Award aims to promote and recognise journalists delivering informed and studied media items about international development and/or humanitarian issues.

Nominations may be made for print, radio, TV or online journalists who have demonstrated exceptional understanding of the complexity of international development or humanitarian issues through a single media item or series in the past twelve months (1 July 2018 - 30 June 2019).

The Award will be presented to a journalist or journalistic team that has produced a single piece or series that:

- Profiles with sensitivity and respect the issues and lives of people experiencing poverty and injustice;
- Shows an understanding of the complexity of humanitarian and/or development issues, and;
- Is judged to have the potential to help expand the knowledge of the Australian public in relation to humanitarian and/or international development issues.

The award recipient will be invited to accept the award at ACFID's Annual Conference which will be held on 23 & 24 October 2019 in Sydney. The conference brings together leaders from the Australian aid and development sector and Government.

In 2018, The Australian's South East Asia correspondent, Amanda Hodge, has won the Australian Council for International Development's (ACFID) 2018 media award for her coverage of the Rohingya crisis and her piece: 'A mother's wish: let Allah take him'.

We invite journalists and staff at ACFID Member Organisations to submit nominations through the attached form. Nominees must currently work in Australian journalism. Please note, media items profiling a single aid and development organisation only will not be considered by the selection panel.

More information about ACFID and the work of our members can be found at www.acfid.asn.au. Completed forms, and requests for information should be emailed to Tim Watkin at timwatkin@acfid.asn.au by 6 September 2019.

About ACFID

The Australian Council for International Development (ACFID) unites Australia's non-government aid and international development organisations to strengthen their collective impact against poverty. Our vision is of a world where gross inequality within societies and between nations is reversed and extreme poverty is eradicated. ACFID's purpose is to provide leadership to the not-for-profit aid and development sector in Australia in achieving this vision and to fairly represent and promote the collective views and interests of our membership. Founded in 1965, ACFID has over 130 members, working in over 90 countries. ACFID's members include large Australian organisations that are part of global federations and alliances, national NGOs, secular and faith based agencies and small NGOs with specific geographic or thematic mandates.
